

UNIMA-USA - LIST of VIDEO RESOURCES FOR EDUCATION

v2022_6-14a - Bradford Clark [bclark@bgsu.edu]

- This is a "short" list (well, compared to the wealth of clips that are available!) of online video resources that may be useful for teaching different aspects and regional traditions related to world puppetry. UNIMA-USA has not posted these videos and does not know if they have been posted with permission of rights holders.
- This is not meant to be an exhaustive list, but is intended to help when introducing some of the major topics and centers of tradition from around the world. Emphasis is placed on traditional performances rather than individual contemporary companies [which we realize problematically gives the mistaken impression that there is more modern innovation in the USA and Europe].
- The videos have not been closely vetted for accuracy, nor does UNIMA-USA vouch for appropriateness of content (including safety of materials and techniques) or suitability of pay-per-view sites.
- Traditional puppet theatre often contains stereotypical representations; it is important to review content for classroom suitability.
- Due to the sheer number of regional variations, some areas are overly-represented. In other cases, a lack of video documentation (or my ignorance) may cause a region to be under-represented.
- Introductory and demonstration videos have been prioritized over purely performance footage.
- When available, English narration [noted as English] and English subtitled footage [Subs] have been prioritized. YouTube often requires subtitles to be manually turned on. This is done by clicking the "cc" button which appears at the bottom of the video window when mouse-clicking within the window. Even when the narration is in English, interviews are often subtitled.
- As the nature of the internet is that of constant change, links may have become inactive.
- Titles of video usually reflect those of original postings, even when spelling or terminology is not standard. This is so that they will be easier to find should the URLs become outdated.
- Non-Latin fonts in titles are best displayed in MS-Unicode or Calibri.
- This is an evolving list and will grow as users provide new resources and previous examples prove less useful.

UNESCO SECTION - EXAMPLES OF INTANGIBLE CULTURAL HERITAGE

- These are concise, comprehensive documentaries that accompany applications to UNESCO for Intangible Cultural Heritage status. They reflect the manner in which the applying country wishes their traditional form of puppetry to be perceived. The films are good introductions, but usually somewhat dry. In the case of the earlier applications, they may be presented in low resolution.
- While YouTube contains some information, the UNESCO keyword search site has both the videos [when available] and written application support materials, which can provide more in-depth introductions. Other related performance forms [including masked performance] are listed as well: <https://ich.unesco.org/en/lists>
- Files for applications currently being considered: <https://ich.unesco.org/en/lists?text=2023&multinational=3&display1=inscriptionID#tabs>
